NextGen CFO, a Consortium of Experienced Financial Professionals, Has Formed to Offer Comprehensive Part-Time CFO Services to Small and Medium-Sized Companies

Greensboro, NC, June 16, 2010 — Four Piedmont-based financial professionals have joined forces to offer comprehensive part-time CFO services to small and medium-sized businesses throughout North and South Carolina. NextGen CFO principals, Tom Schultz, Tom Keeter, Ken Mahoney and Michael Spohn, have decades of experience at the CFO level in business planning, finance and accounting, financial projections, reporting, performance metrics, mergers and acquisitions and exit strategy formulation. Formerly business owners, full-time CFOs or CPA firm partners, each of the principals has been offering part-time CFO services for at least four years.

“We recognized an unmet need among small to medium-sized companies that are the driving force in our economy,” stated Tom Schultz who co-founded NextGen CFO with Tom Keeter in 2009. “Our experience has shown that most owners and CEOs have higher-level finance needs, but many companies cannot afford (or even have enough work for) a full-time CFO. As a result, those tasks end up being performed by the owner/CEO, which detracts from time spent running and growing their business.”

With the recent addition of principals Ken Mahoney and Michael Spohn, and associates Brandon Harris and Barry Safrit, NextGen CFO offers a valuable, comprehensive skill set on an affordable basis. Fee arrangements are flexible with monthly or project fees, or daily or hourly rates, based on the general scope of the work and the needs of the client.
